Partnerships with local agencies, government groups and leveraging outside resources will be discussed.

Creating Moves to Opportunity

How are agencies using their MTW flexibility to participate in the Creating Moves to Opportunity (CMTO) program? The CMTO research project aims to help us understand how to effectively reduce barriers and level the playing field for families with children trying to access higher opportunity neighborhoods. This session will explore how different communities have adapted the model to fit their local context, including various place-based, service-enriched, and regional approaches such as coaching and counseling, landlord incentives, housing locator services, flexible financial assistance, and expedited lease up. The session will also explore how to work effectively with researchers and partnering with foundations.

Increasing Affordable Housing Opportunities 1

This two-part session explores utilizing project-based vouchers, RAD, and other creative strategies to ensure the long-term stability of affordable housing developments.

CEO and Executive Director's Closed Session

This closed session provides an opportunity for MTW and non-MTW CEOs and Executive Directors to discuss MTW-related topics.

Addressing Homelessness

Rising housing costs, historically low vacancy rates, system silos, and diminishing funding. How does an agency address the growing crisis of homelessness in this climate? Moving to Work agencies are responding with responsive and innovative housing solutions. In this session, we'll explore the policies, programs, and partnerships that MTW agencies are testing and implementing to meet the needs of this growing population.

MTW Agencies as Agents of Change

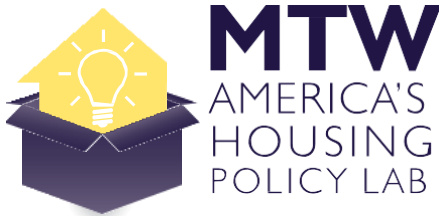

MTW's flexibilities provide agencies the unique opportunity to look at affordable housing as a mechanism that goes beyond providing shelter for low-income families. In this session, we'll explore programs in which MTW agencies use affordable housing as a driver of larger change, from small projects that focus on food accessibility and the arts to neighborhood-wide economic development initiatives.

University Studies Update

Controversial activities like work requirements, term-limits, and rent reform can be tough to design and implement, and outcomes related to health, income, and family stability can be as diverse as the families they serve. During this session we'll explore what works and what doesn't with three university researchers presenting the outcomes from their evaluations of self-sufficiency activities at the housing authorities of Charlotte, Champaign County, and San Bernardino County.

Finance Roundtable Session 2

The closed session will focus on topics related to finance and MTW.

Session Descriptions

Wednesday, May 2, 2018

MTW Assessment Tool Update at 8:15 am

Since 2012, MTW agencies have worked to develop a management and performance assessment tool that doubles as an alternative evaluation methodology to PHAS and SEMAP. A demonstration of the MTW Assessment Tool, a web-based portal developed to replace PHAS and SEMAP, will be performed by HAI Group.

Concurrent Sessions, 8:45 am Strategies to Mitigate Shortfalls

Budget shortfalls are expected with rising rents and current and anticipated funding decreases. MTW provides flexibility to begin to address these shortfalls. What are some strategies other housing authorities are utilizing to mitigate these shortfalls? This session will discuss these specific strategies and how these strategies can be communicated with participants, community partners, and the media.

“Policy Considerations and Constraints for Designing MTW Activities” Roundtable

A facilitator will lead a roundtable to discuss aspects of designing MTW activities such as the 50900, administrative plan or ACOP, local political climate, agency strategic plan, funding levels, and client advocates.

Increasing Affordable Housing Opportunities 2

The session explores utilizing project-based vouchers, RAD, and other creative strategies to ensure the long-term stability of affordable housing developments.

IT Open Forum with Sponsors

Conference attendees and sponsoring agencies are invited to discuss IT topics with experts and knowledgeable professionals. Open dialogue is encouraged on topics such as business intelligence, housing management software, database customization, owner and tenant portals, and waitlist management.
